Briefing on Public Consultation on Review of the Patent System in Hong Kong
1st December, 2011 (Thursday)

The current patent system in Hong Kong has been in place for more than a decade. To ensure that the system continues to meet present-day circumstances and that its future positioning is in alignment with the vision of developing Hong Kong into a regional innovation and technology hub, the Government issued a consultation paper seeking views from the public and stakeholders on a review of the patent system in Hong Kong.

Therefore, FHKI Intellectual Property Centre and Hong Kong Coalition for Intellectual Property Rights together with the Intellectual Property Department, HKSAR are co-organising the captioned briefing. From this briefing, enterprises may know more about the issues raised in the consultation paper, including whether and, if so how the patent system should be enhanced. In the briefing, a representative from the Government will explain details of the consultation paper and answer any queries from the participants. Members and enterprises are welcomed to join.
