

Cross search list

In examining applications for registration, we need to search the registry database for identical or similar earlier registered trade marks and applications for registration (see Chapters on Search and Scope of searches – relative grounds for refusal). The registry's cross search list sets out, in principle, the classes in which we would normally search in respect of particular goods or services to help us to identify earlier marks for identical or similar goods or services. As the list is not exhaustive, we need to exercise our judgement in deciding the class(es) to be searched.
